

BACHELOR OF APPLIED SCIENCE IN RADIOLOGIC TECHNOLOGY

The Bachelor of Applied Science (BAS) Degree in Radiologic Technology is designed for professionals with allied health training from an Associate of Applied Science degree, graduates of hospital-based programs, or other accredited comprehensive training program that results in ARRT registry and two years related work experience. The degree is structured on the “inverted major” concept which builds an individually designed academic degree program around the major you have already completed.

BACHELOR OF APPLIED SCIENCE DISTINCTIONS

- Enroll in completely online courses offered every eight weeks - one course at a time, or more to accelerate your degree completion.
- Transfer up to 90 credits toward your Siena Heights degree. Additional credit may be awarded for those who hold advanced ARRT registries.
- Depending on your remaining degree requirements, finish your bachelor degree in less than 2 years.
- Further your career goals by taking courses in business, health care management, social science, and more.
- Enhance your Radiologic Technology major with a Health Care Management minor available completely online.
