Science . . . Discovering New Ways at Siena

Chemicals, test tubes and beakers in warm labs, and the memorization of bones and muscles accompanied by a dozen cups of black coffee at 4 a.m. remain integral to the study of science at Siena. However, some notable changes have been made.

A few years ago, Siena moved from a departmental to a divisional structure, with the creation of the Natural Science Division which includes the departments of biology, chemistry, mathematics and physics. More recently, each division has been required to develop a core of classes which are interdisciplinary and necessary to each major in that division.

The science department is responding by developing a curriculum which investigates three distinct areas: tools of the scientist, history and philosophy of science, and the research endeavor of science.

The "tools" component is presently being developed which includes the use of a computer, problem-solving skills and the literature of science. A recent federal grant has brought a computer to Siena, and a short course in basic computer programming is becoming popular in the division.

Tim Husband (mathematics) has developed a unique course in problem-solving skills. The new course teaches students to recognize and define problems. Skills to evaluate the alternatives are discussed.

Biology instructor, Dr. Eugene Chapman, has sparked a new kind of research at Siena this year, the study of fungi. During the past year, science students have been involved in researching the properties of and the best conditions for several fungi.

Pam Carr, Adrian, Michigan; Thomas Gross, Adrian, Michigan; Brian Shrimpton, Rockville Centre, New York; and Loretta Kroetch, Wilmot, New Hampshire; did original research in this area of study and the projects of Carr, Shrimpton, and Gross culminated in a joint seminar in April.

Carr researched Coprinus domesticus (a mushroom) and its ability to degrade cellulose and starch into glucose. Gross studied the effect of various temperatures on the respiration rate of a thermophilic and mesophilic fungus. Shrimpton investigated the effects of twelve anti-fungal fish medications on the growth rate of Saprolegnia parasitica, a fungus that often parasites fish. Kroetch explored the effects of various temperatures on the synthesis of saturated and unsaturated fatty acids of a thermophilic and mesophilic fungus.

Dr. Chapman publishes the results of the students' findings in professional journals.

The ethics of the scientist are constantly questioned with respect to energy, pollution, and especially genetic research. Students in the science division are made aware of these questions. The division will require two courses (Philosophy of Person and an Interdisciplinary Ethics Seminar) in order to prepare each student for these questions.

Since societal concerns affect all students, the Science Division has made contributions to other courses when requested. Sr. Helen Duggan has presented topics of genetic research in several course contexts and at a school-wide Aquinas forum.

"While we continue to adapt to the needs and signs of the times," says chemistry division chairperson Sr. Sharon Weber, "I am confident that the tradition of hard work and high achievement will remain characteristic of science at Siena."

Several of the science students at Siena will continue or have continued their education following graduation: Thomas Gross will pursue graduate work at Siena; Sue Kessler is working toward a Ph.D. in medical science at the Medical College of Ohio; Karen Kieswetter is interning in medical technology at Southwest General Hospital in Cleveland; Ann Schwartz is interning at Hackley Hospital in Muskegon and Brian Shrimpton is interning at St. Joseph Hospital in Fort Wayne.

Father John Keefer

Leaving Behind his Life's Spirit

Generous portions of love, people, God and life itself are the ingredients of Rev. John M. Keefer's "living" recipe, simmering a steady diet of hope, understanding and a sense of shared purpose within the Siena community during his nine-year tenure as chaplain at Siena Heights College.

"Love is the one thing alone that really drives out fear," said the humanitarian prior to leaving Siena for Wheeling, West Virginia in May.

"I really like people more than anything; they're what make it all stick together," said Father Keefer. "I just think it suffices to say that I go on living because living is incredibly exciting. Out of the most human experiences, comes deeper understanding, greater compassion and a deeper appreciation that life is a real gift that's terrifyingly short and wonderfully delightful."

Fr. Keefer is now preaching and sharing a renewed study of Scriptures as a member of a Dominican "task force" in Appalachia.

While at Siena, Fr. Keefer succeeded in fulfilling his desire, "to be a good human being, deeply in love with the people around me and so in love with God."

He belonged to the Adrian Council of Churches, where he served as a member of the Liturgical Committee and has been instrumental in relating the changing liturgy of the church to the lives of the students. In addition, he participated in the Kiwanis Club of Michigan and the Lenawee County Vicariate.

Besides all his other activities and duties, Fr. Keefer earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in ceramics while at Siena.

"I've been able to do and grow with a real understanding of the people around me, so that somehow or other, we make it together in a community and world of hope instead of a world torn by despair, terror and fear."

Why wouldn't Fr. Keefer change places with any other human being?

"Simply because you get to know who you are and the person you are is the person who matters. If you were to be someone else you'd have to go through their (life) process, and mine has been too delightful and exciting to change places with anyone else."

Ordained in 1956, Fr. Keefer is a member of the Dominican Order, Province of St. Joseph. When discussing the church, he emphasizes love and truth. Yet, he maintains that one is always cognizant of the 'beloved's' faults and shortcomings.

"They are lived with and not run away from. I don't believe in shoveling them under the rug, but living with them and being critical. But also being hopeful. The church that I've known and experienced as a Catholic has been one terribly filled with hope. It's shortcomings are glaring, worst of all is the continued ridiculous treatment of women in the church. Nothing that anyone will ever say could possibly make me conceive otherwise.

"The church's openness to the presence of the spirit calling, to argue and to understand anew, and to believe in the power of God to help us overcome such myopia, are the reasons I love my church and my religion. I really hope that it will go on and that people will continue to argue and understand and will be unafraid to venture forth in the power of the holy spirit."

Prior to leaving for Appalachia, Fr. Keefer received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Siena during commencement ceremonies in May. He was also the commencement speaker.

In presenting the honorary doctorate, Sr. Celeste Bourke, O.P. Associate Professor of Art at Siena cited him for, "the empathy, the joy, the encouragement and the gentleness he provided the Siena community."

He was honored by students, faculty and administrators of the college at three separate occasions prior to graduation.

A testimonial dinner was held in his behalf, followed by a "roast", recalling incidents and events of his life at Siena Heights. A public reception and liturgical service, with members of the Adrian Council of Churches as special guests, was held the Sunday before graduation.

When asked of his future, Fr. Keefer concluded, "I took forward very much to going on in my life learning more, to meeting people, and sharing with them a lot of beautiful things that I've learned since I've been at Siena Heights. My own life has become more peaceful, and believe it or not, a little slower pace. The freedom that we have enjoyed, of self expression and academic freedom, were freedoms that people struggled long and hard to give each other. I am so glad that I have shared them and experienced them, and that's what I'm looking forward to when I go from here. Every moment and every day and every happening, for me, has been a real blessing."

Fr. Keefer's presence for nine years on campus has been a "real blessing" for the entire Siena community.

100 Women Attend Workshop

A special workshop designed for women interested in beginning or continuing their college educations was hosted by Siena Thursday, August 10, in Archangelus Lounge on campus. The program was entitled College Information Night for Women.

"Many adults who consider returning to college usually harbor a mixture of hopes and uncertainties," says Dr. Tom Maher, Dean of the College. "This evening not only provided answers for the many questions concerning college, but also was an enjoyable social gathering and opportunity to meet others in the same situation."

The relaxed and informative evening got underway at 5:30 p.m. with refreshments. Members of the Siena staff and a panel of women at various stages in their college educations led the discussion from 6-8:30 p.m. The evening concluded with a spaghetti dinner prepared by Dr. Louis Vaccaro, president of Siena.

The workshop topics included financial aid, career planning, credit for life experience, college programs, and issues of adjustment and transition for adults entering college.

Vermont College Honors Dr. Vaccaro

Dr. Louis Vaccaro, Siena president, received an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from Vermont College of Norwich University at its 144th graduation ceremony May 28.

"In recognition of your many contributions to higher education, your deep concern for students, and your devotion to academic excellence, Vermont College confers upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities," he was cited.

Besides receiving the honor, Dr. Vaccaro also gave the graduation address. He delivered a philosophical speech, comparing life to a game of cards: "Certainly the hand that is dealt you is predetermined, but the way you play that hand is free choice."

Sr. Donna Kustusich Leaves to Pursue Ph.D. at Catholic U.

Donna Kustusich, O.P., an instructor at Siena, is taking a three-year leave of absence to earn her Ph.D. in Religious Education. She left Siena in August to attend Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. After completing her doctorate, she hopes to return to Siena.

Siena Instructors Earn Ph.D.'s

Ms. Jean Alvarez, a psychology instructor at Siena Heights will be awarded a Doctor of Education degree from the University of Northern Colorado's School for Educational Change and Development in August.

She completed her work in May when her dissertation, Psychological Androgyny Among Catholic Sisters, was approved. The term, androgyny, refers to those psychological and emotional traits traditionally associated with both the masculine and feminine sex roles.

Ms. Alvarez's study involved a comparison of two groups of Catholic sisters with two lay women's organizations. The Bem Sex Role Inventory was administered to both female groups. She found that religious women were more androgynous than the lay women. The Sisters had developed strong leadership skills usually associated with males as well as the more traditionally accepted feminine characteristics. On the other hand, the lay females did not exhibit those same leadership abilities.

She has co-authored a book entitled, Foundations of Oppression, which was published by the Minnesota Department of Education and is now widely used in Minnesota school systems.

Sr. Eileen Rice, O.P., an instructor in education at Siena, recently learned that her doctoral dissertation will be published by the University of Michigan Monograph Series. The work is entitled The Superintendency and the Implementation of Progressive Practices in the Elementary Schools of Ann Arbor from 1921-1942.

Sr. Eileen received her doctorate from the University of Michigan, December 18, 1977. She earned a Doctor of Philosophy in Education with a specialization in educational administration.

Before coming to Siena Heights College in 1975, Dr. Rice was Principal of St. Joseph Academy in Adrian from 1972 through 1974. She taught elementary school in Clawson and Flint from 1965-1969. In 1968, she received a B.S. in mathematics from Siena Heights College and the following year, earned an M.A. in mathematics education from the University of Michigan.

The dissertation was a study which compared the written statements of the superintendents from 1921-1942 with the educational practices in the elementary schools to determine how they agreed with the principles espoused by the Ann Arbor administrators.

Swedish Weaving at Siena

Ragnhild Fridh, Swedish weaving artist, conducted workshops in the art of Swedish loom weaving during summer term at Siena.

Ms. Fridh studied Damask, Opphamta, Weft Patterned Tabby, Double Weave Types, Rolakan and other pick up weaving techniques at Vavstolsbriken, an international school of traditional Swedish weaving with modern adaptations.

Mrs. Fridh runs a weaving school of her own, "Skogsgarden, Kalhult," in Osby, Sweden. Over the years, Fridh's studio has grown from a modest one floor house to a building of three floors.

College Relations Office Reorganizes; Three Join Staff.

Mrs. Howard

Sr. Rita Gleason

House

Ms. Betzoldt

Northover

Three new staff members and the promotion of two present members completes the reorganization and renovation of the Office for College Relations at Siena. The department was formerly known as the Institutional Advancement Office.

The trio of new appointees are: Kathleen Johnston-Betzoldt, Director of Alumni/Parent Relations; Clifford House, Associate Director of Development; and Randall Northover, Director of Public Information.

Charlotte Howard, formerly the Director of Public Information, has been promoted to the position of Executive Director for College Relations, the departmental head.

Sr. Rita Gleason, O.P., who has been with the college since 1973, has been promoted to the position of Director of Development as well as Director of the newly organized President's Cabinet.

Ms. Betzoldt, a resident of Tecumseh, comes to Siena following a special project with the Michigan End Stage Renal Disease Network in Ann Arbor.

Prior to that, Kathy served as a director of adult volunteers with the Kidney Foundation of Michigan and the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council.

She also has assumed part time teaching stints at the University of Michigan, American University in Bangkok, Thailand, and Samutpraken Elementary School in Thailand.

In receiving her B.S. from Central Michigan University, Ms. Betzoldt majored in sociology and minored in psychology and anthropology.

House replaces John Falchi who took a position as Vice-President of College Relations at St. Mary's College in Winona, Wisconsin.

Cliff was the Executive Director of the Hemophilia Foundation of Michigan in Ann Arbor before coming to Siena. Before that, he was a regional director of the Michigan chapter of the Arthritis Foundation, and the Michigan Lung Association. He was the assistant director of Career service at Kalamazoo College and an instructor at Western Michigan University, Wayne State University, and River Rouge High School.

He earned his B.A. degree from Olivet College in Olivet, Michigan, majoring in political science and minoring in English and philosophy. He received his M.A. in history from Wayne State University.

Northover comes to Siena after working as a reporter-writer, photographer, editor, and advertising salesperson for four weekly papers based in Hastings, Michigan.

Randy received his B.S. from Western Michigan University, majoring in Communications Arts and Sciences and minoring in English. Prior to that, he earned an Associate degree from Kellogg Community College in Battle Creek, majoring in Art.

While at WMU, Northover had an essay published in the annual university literary magazine featuring the best student writing at the college.

"The decision to reorganize the Institutional Advancement Office and rename it the Department for College Relations," said Dr. Louis Vaccaro, president of the college, "reflects our growing awareness of the need to coordinate all of the college activities concerned with public information, community relations, financial development and parent/alumni affairs. I believe our new staff will better enable us to communicate with and serve our constituencies."

Siena Staff Publishes Book on Values Conference

Jim Ebben, director of the Office of Professional Development, and Michael Donnellan, director of Project Values, both of Siena, recently edited a book, Values Pedagogy in Higher Education, dealing with the proceedings of a unique 'Values' Conference held on the Siena campus April 2-5. The book was published and released by Swenk-Tuttle Press Inc. in Adrian, July 17.

More than 130 educators, representing 50 institutions from 22 states, attended the conference. Rev. Paul C. Reinert, S.J., chancellor of St. Louis University was the keynote speaker. The assessment session was headed by Dr. Daniel Callahan, director of the Hastings Center, Institute of Society, Ethics, and Life Sciences, Hastings-on-the-Hudson, New York.

Daniel Callahan

Callahan founded the center in 1969. He is the author of sixteen books and over 200 articles, and was chosen as one of the 200 young leaders in the United States by Time magazine. His book on abortion won him the Thomas More Medal, and he is listed in Who's Who in the World and Who's Who in America.

Values Pedagogy in Higher Education includes contributions from Reinert and Callahan, Dr. Paul Nash of Boston College, plus 21 other educators throughout the United States.

Contributors in the publication from Siena Heights are: Patricia Walter, O.P., and Donna Kustus, O.P., the Department of Religious Studies, A Developmental Approach to Values Education; Dr. Thomas Maher, Dean of the College, Epilogue: Agenda for the Future; and Donnellan and Ebben, Summary of Panels and Group Discussions.

Graphics were done by Jeannine Klemm, O.P., of the Art Department at Siena.

The book is available at the Office of Professional Development, Siena Heights College, Adrian, MI 49221. The price is $5.00.

“Interdisciplinary”

Siena Expands Curriculum Offerings

“Interdisciplinary” is the term that perhaps best describes new developments in the curriculum of Siena Heights College during the past academic year.

In adopting the “Academic Blueprint”, (or new curriculum plan), in early 1977, the faculty agreed to reduce dramatically the number of majors offered through a variety of combinations of existing majors. It was thought that, over time, these new majors would concentrate resources and enable the college to offer fewer but stronger academic programs.

Upon arriving at Siena, Dr. Louis Vaccaro applauded the new curricular moves, but felt that the smaller number of majors somewhat constricted student choice. One of the new President’s first initiatives was to charge a committee of the faculty to review the recently established curriculum and to suggest ways in which the college could create several new majors out of existing resources.

Four new interdisciplinary majors were created during the year. American Studies will draw from a variety of disciplines in the Humanities and Social Sciences and, in addition to providing a broad perspective on American Culture will prepare students for a number of public service careers. The Social Science major brings together a wide range of courses from the social science disciplines to provide a student with an overview of the behavior of human beings and their institutions. In addition to offering this broad general education, the Social Science major is likely to attract those students interested in teaching social sciences at the secondary level.

In similar fashion, the Natural Science major is an interdisciplinary presentation of the natural sciences. Not only will it be useful for potential teachers, but should provide a basic foundation for a variety of scientifically-related careers. The major itself is designed to enable students to come to grips with the ethical issues of concern to the scientist and to understand the shifting context of scientific knowledge.

The Home Economics major was also developed from a set of courses drawn from several departments in the management division. The variety of courses in this major should highlight to students the many interesting career paths emerging from this rapidly developing field of study.

In addition to approving these four interdisciplinary majors, the faculty voted to approve the reinstatement of the Music major. It was believed that since the college was already presenting a series of strong offerings in music, it could rather easily move to establish a viable music major. This program should attract quality music students to the Siena campus and thus continue the college’s tradition of excellence in its student musical organizations.

In commenting on the new programs, Dr. Thomas Maher, Dean of the College, noted that “the Siena faculty last year made a major move in the direction of quality in the adoption of a new curriculum which consolidated academic programs. These new majors are largely the result of creative recombinations of subject matter and provide the student more flexibility and a wider range of curricular options at little additional cost to the institution.”

TOLEDO EXECUTIVE LECTURES AT SIENA HEIGHTS COLLEGE

Borge Reimer, senior vice-president of the Dana Corporation, Toledo, stressed the importance of establishing goals for long range planning as he spoke to Siena Heights College business students.

Reimer, a member of the Planning Committee of the board of trustees of Siena Heights, also shared his insights and expertise with members of the Administrative Council of the College.

Poet Writes to Music, Dance

The poetry of Simone Press, an assistant professor of English at Siena, accompanied the music of Steve Schwartz and the choreography of Gay Delanghe and the University of Michigan Dance Company in the performance of “An Alleluia of Larks,” Saturday and Sunday, July 29-30, at the university dance building.

Simone was commissioned by composer Schwartz to write a narrative poem in three parts, as his musical composition was written.

Dr. Stimson Returns After Nine Years

Dr. Miriam Michael Stimson, O.P., has been appointed Director of Graduate Studies at Siena. She returns to the Siena campus after serving for nine years as the chairman of the Chemistry Department at Keuka College in New York.

She held faculty positions at Siena from 1939-1968, serving as chairman of the Chemistry Department from 1948-1968, and chairman of the Natural Science Division from 1959-1968.

Dr. Stimson received her B.S. from Siena, majoring in biology. She earned her M.S. and Ph.D. in physical organic chemistry from Intitutum Divi Thomas in Cincinnati.

Dr. Stimson has had numerous articles published in scholarly journals. She is listed in American Men of Science, American Men and Women of Science, Dictionary of International Biography, International Who’s Who in Community Service, Who’s Who of American Women, and Who’s Who in the East.

Donnellan Attends National Conference

Dr. Michael Donnellan, Associate Professor of Religious Studies at Siena, attended a national conference on Capitalism and Socialism in Airlie House, Virginia July 9 -14.

He was chosen as one of 35 educators from around the country to be invited to the conference sponsored by Syracuse University and American Enterprise Institute in Washington, D.C.

The participants discussed the effect of capitalism and socialism on American economics.

Professor Seymour Lipsiet of Stanford University, Professor Peter Berger of Rutgers University and Ben Wattenberg from “The Real American” PBS television program were among the prominent lecturers in attendance.

199 Degrees Awarded at Graduation '78

Graduation weekend at Siena Heights College began with an Alumni-sponsored dance for graduates Friday, May 12 and concluded Sunday, May 14 with commencement exercises in Lumen Chapel on the college campus.

The college conferred 199 degrees, including 24 Masters, 130 Bachelors, and 45 Associate degrees.

In addition, honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degrees were conferred on Mrs. Constance B. Binsfeld, Michigan State Representative, 104th District, and Rev. John M. Keefer, O.P., Siena Heights chaplain.

Highlighting the commencement program was the presentation of the first Siena Medal to Father Piet Schoonenberg, S.J., Catholic theologian, teacher, and author. Schoonenberg, a collaborator in the preparation of the Dutch catechism, is also noted for his book, "The Christ," which confronts the "God-is-dead" theology. The book is an elaboration on Rev. Schoonenberg's lectures given at the Catholic University of Nijmegen, The Netherlands.

Father Schoonenberg, who taught theology for several summer sessions at Siena Heights, has taught and lectured at the University of Windsor, Ontario, at Fordham, Duquesne, Weston College in Cambridge, and other American Universities.

In presenting The Siena Medal to Father Schoonenberg, Dr. Louis Vaccaro, Siena Heights president, cited the theologian's "untiring and courageous pursuit of truth, his fearless and honest examinations of truths, and his efforts to create a new theology that will speak prophetically for Christians of the future."

The Siena Medal, commissioned by Dr. Vaccaro and designed and executed by Sr. Jeannine Klemm, O.P., head of Siena Heights' Art Department, symbolizes the highest award the college bestows on an individual.

The Sunday afternoon graduation ceremony opened with a faculty-graduate procession from Ledwidge Hall to the chapel, led by Faculty-Marshall Dr. Mary Louise Hall, Chairperson of Humanities. The opening invocation was given by Father David J. Van Horn, Associate Professor of Art, and Dr. Thomas H. Maher, Dean of the College, gave the welcoming address.

Following brief comments by graduating seniors Laurie Small and Richard LaRowe, Sr. Trudy McSorley, O.P., Instructor in Theater, introduced the commencement speaker, Rev. John M. Keefer.

Father Keefer's address envisioned the present and future as a "galactic prophesy" relating to the feast of Pentecost being celebrated Sunday.

Binsfeld

Pentecost reflected the graduation of the disciples of the Lord, said Father Keefer, as they ventured forth and made a lasting impact on their world. In that same spirit he called on Siena Heights graduates to make a commitment and impact, in his or her own way, as they moved forth from Siena into tomorrow's world.

Diplomas were presented by Chester Devenow, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and by Dr. Vaccaro. Patricia Walter, O.P., and Helen Duggan, O.P., Chairperson and Chairperson-Elect of the Siena Heights Teaching Faculty Assembly, presided over the hooding of the graduates.

Following closing comments by Dr. Vaccaro and benediction by Patricia Walter, the assembly sang "Hail Siena," and exited to the strains of the traditional Recessional March.

A President's Reception for faculty, graduates, and guests was held in Trinity Garden following the Commencement exercises.

Baccalaureate services for the graduating class were held Saturday evening in Lumen Chapel. Sr. Rosemary

Congratulations & Welcome Class of '78

Webster defines the word educate as to lead out, to bring forth, to form. We can all concede that this is an adequate definition and describes well the process of the last few years. Professors and teachers have carefully and thoughtfully brought us to this point in our lives. We are equipped, if we did the job well, to take our place in society as educated persons.

However, we are all aware that our education is still just beginning. We will lead ourselves to greater heights, to more excellent goals, stimulated by the background we have received from the college.

Siena has offered us leadership, we must lead others now. Siena has taught us generosity, we must give generously of the wisdom, the goodness, and the love that is Siena. People must be acutely aware that we are different from others, that our entire life is necessarily different because of our exposure to the heights that Siena is.

The Alumni Association greets you as members. Your privilege of membership

Schoonenberg

Ferguson, O.P., prioress-general of the Adrian Dominican Congregation, was the Baccalaureate speaker. The names of all graduating seniors were read at the communion prayer during the Eucharistic celebration, and services were climaxed by the traditional "passing of the torch and rose."

As the services ended, seniors presented a lighted candle to members of the junior class, and in turn the seniors received a single rose from the undergraduates. The exchange symbolized the leadership of the seniors being passed down to their successors and the hope for success to the graduates-to-be as they prepared to leave the college ranks.

Earlier Saturday, the Adrian Dominican Community hosted a luncheon for the College Board of Trustees, followed by a trustees' meeting and a social hour for trustees, faculty and administration in the Ledwidge Ballroom.

A graduation dance was also held Saturday evening in the Archangelus Lounge.

brings obligations. We look to you for your support in many ways: monetary so that others can continue to receive, to be lead forth, and physical support by being present to the college. Keep in contact with the departments and instructors, let them know wherein are the strengths and weaknesses of the institution, inform the college of new demands in your field that those who come after you will be better prepared in every way. Siena needs your support in every way and will rely on you for years ahead.

As you have enjoyed your Siena education at this college encourage others to seek here what you found. Sending students to campus is the greatest contribution and sincere thanks you can give.

We congratulate you on your achievements and wish you well. May the dear Lord guard and bless each of you always.

President proclaims

Renaissance Faire — Honors Day

Dr. Vaccaro, President of Siena, is shown above accepting the proclamation from Fr. John Keefer signaling the opening of the second annual Renaissance Faire and Honors Day. The Faire on April 30 commemorated the feast of St. Catherine of Siena, the college's patron.

The festive weekend at Siena included the honors convocation, a liturgical celebration in the Renaissance tradition, a parade and a variety of booths featuring jugglers, madrigal singers, alchemists, astrologers, art activities and a formal medieval banquet featuring the culinary art of Dr. Vaccaro.

Siena Co-sponsors Business Seminar

"Business and Higher Education: Tradition and Beyond," a one-day seminar brought together Toledo area business leaders and educators to analyze the training and education needs of industry.

John F. Savage, CLU, former general agent of Columbus Mutual Life Insurance, was the guest speaker.

Co-sponsored by Lourdes College, Sylvania, Ohio, and Siena Heights, the conference panelists included Alfred Hawkins, Vice-President, Libbey-Owens-Ford; Charles Milliken, head of Business Management, Siena; Sr. Jane Mary Howard, I.H.M., Chairperson, Management Division, Siena; and Dr. Louis Vaccaro, President of Siena.

Sr. Mary Rosaria Petra, O.S.F., President of Lourdes College gave the welcome, and Sr. M. Lucilla Osinski, O.S.F., Academic Dean at Lourdes, was the moderator.

Sr. Jeannine Named to Accreditation Team

Sr. Jeannine Klemm, O.P., Chairperson of the Art Division at Siena, was chosen this year as a member of the Michigan State Department of Education Accreditation Committee of Art and Design. The committee recently evaluated the art program at Kendall School of Design near Grand Rapids.

Jeannine received her B.A. at Siena and her M.A. and Ed.D. at Columbia University. She has been on the faculty at Siena for 22 years.

Dr. Mary Louise Hall, O.P., chairman of the English Department at Siena, is shown above discussing Catholic literature at the eighth annual Inter-Faith Day held at St. Therese Parish, Lansing, when women had an opportunity to learn about literature of the various faiths.

Maher, Ebben Publish Faculty Essay

Dr. Thomas Maher, Dean of the College, and James Ebben, Director of Professional Development at Siena, have co-authored an essay published in a book entitled, Employing Part-Time Faculty, a quarterly sourcebook sponsored by the Association for Institutional Research.

Their essay, The Margin of Quality: Selection and Evaluation of Part-Time Faculty, deals with Siena's formal development program for its part-time faculty. Dr. Maher and Ebben use the experiment at Siena to recommend patterns and principles for increasing the commitment and effectiveness of part-time faculty.

Financial Management Program Launched

The Management Division at Siena received a $40,000 grant over a three-year period to initiate a new program in Financial Management at the college.

In the fall semester, Siena will offer Principles of Banking, and Principles of Savings and Loan.

"We hope to offer a major in Financial Management within the next couple years," says Charles Milliken, head of the Business Management Division.

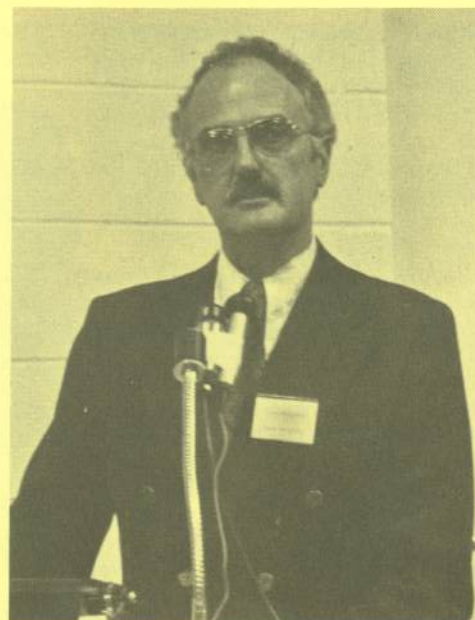

Milliken and William "Buzz" Walzam have been instrumental in bringing the program to Siena.

It's a fast one across the inside corner . . . as Dr. Louis Vaccaro, president of Siena, demonstrates his pitching prowess to a member of the Siena Heights women's softball team.

As president at Siena, Vaccaro's philosophy is that athletics and academics should be integrated for all students, not for just a select few.

The Report of the President 1978

Introduction

This is my first annual report since coming to the College in August of 1977. As I reflect on this past year I am heartened by the growing awareness and support of so many alumni and friends of the College. As you will see from reading this report we have many things to be thankful for. The growing sense of community, the strengthening of our new and existing programs, and the material support given by so many friends of the College are visible signs that Siena is on the move. In noting these advances we should not rest in our efforts to continue our forward momentum.

The challenges faced by most private colleges in the United States will continue to intensify within the next few years. The new programs and sense of community that we are blessed with here at Siena will, I feel, hold us in good stead as we continue to meet the challenges and opportunities of the next few years. With your interest and support Siena will remain among the strongest church-related colleges in this part of the country.

The following sections summarize the most significant and noteworthy events of the past year. Taken together, they provide, I believe, a true and fair account of our cooperative efforts to keep Siena strong and excellent.

Academic Affairs

The 1977-78 academic year was devoted to continued strengthening of the academic programs at Siena. Many individual faculty members were involved in a variety of interesting projects.

FACULTY

At the February meeting of the Board of Trustees, Sr. Magdalena Ezoë, O.P. was formally promoted from Assistant Professor to Associate Professor of Music.

Two members of the Siena Heights faculty completed advanced degrees during the year. Sr. Eileen Rice, O.P., Instructor in Education, received a Ph.D. in Education from the University of Michigan, and Jean Alvarez, Assistant Professor of Psychology, received her doctorate in Educational Psychology from the University of Northern Colorado.

Sr. Beth Butler, O.P., Instructor in Criminal Justice, and Patricia Huddleston, Lecturer in Home Economics, are continuing their studies at Michigan State University. Sr. Barbara Wall, O.P., Assistant Professor of Philosophy, has completed all requirements for a Ph.D. in Philosophy at Marquette University. Sr. Donna Kustus, O.P. has been granted a leave of absence for the 1978-79 year to pursue a Ph.D. in religious studies and values education at Catholic University of America.

Several new faculty and staff joined the College this past year: Sr. Dolores Enderle, O.P. became Director of Skill Development and Associate Professor of English. William Walzem joined the faculty as Assistant Professor of Business. The Instructional Services staff welcomed Kent Sheets as Director of Audio-Visual Services, Charles Kern as Media Materials Coordinator and Rudolph Nardon as Instructional Services Technician.

CURRICULUM

1977-78 was a year for refinement of the programs adopted through the Academic Blueprint which had been approved following months of study and discussion. Each division worked to clarify course requirements in both the new and the combined majors. The redesigned programs of study will become operative with the 1978-79 year.

During the course of the past year, a faculty committee proposed several new, interdisciplinary majors. These programs of study, fashioned from existing offerings, will not require additional resources, and will provide a greater variety and attractiveness in the offerings of the College. The new majors instituted in this format are American Studies, Natural Science, Home Economics, and Social Science. A fifth major, Music, was approved at the May meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Also, this past year the faculty spent considerable time in reconsidering the question of general education, or the "college core." Siena Heights College, along with many other colleges, some years ago dropped all general requirements for its students. A growing national dissatisfaction with the results provided both an impetus and an urgency to the discussion.

After lengthy debate, the response of the faculty has been a two-tiered approach to the question of college core. In December, 1977, the faculty voted to implement the idea of the "Embedded Core." In this concept, each major program would be responsible for designating courses and other learning activities which would enable students to reach the goals of the mission statement in the context of the major. Thus, a variety of particularized requirements would provide students a wide range of routes toward improving communication skills, developing ethical sensitivity, building management skills and becoming aware of career planning.

The faculty, however, favored an additional common requirement to supplement the Embedded Core. In May, the faculty voted to adopt a core requirement of 12 semester hours. The precise content of these hours will be developed in continuing discussion throughout 1978-79. Both the Embedded Core and the 12-hour core are expected to be introduced in the fall of 1979.

FACULTY ACTIVITIES AND DEVELOPMENT

A number of faculty and staff consulted, published articles, lectured and were panelists during the academic year 1977-78. In addition, two major conferences were initiated by Siena faculty and staff, and were well attended by Siena personnel. These were a national conference on General Education held at Shakertown near Lexington, Kentucky, in November, 1977, and a national conference on the Pedagogy of Values Education held at Siena in April, 1978.

Through a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education, (FIPSE), a number of Siena faculty were involved in a wide variety of both personal and institutionally-oriented professional development projects. The energy and creativity of our faculty have been demonstrated time and time again, and provides as good a rationale as possible for the continued existence of the small, private college.

AIDP

The grant from the Advanced Institutional Development Program of Title III, HEW, has enabled the College to move rapidly on a number of important fronts. Our Library capability has been enhanced greatly, and the telecommunications capacity we have gained provides us with excellent instructional aids.

Another project of the AIDP grant is the enhancement and integration of our services in career planning, skill development, cooperative education and academic advising. The General Studies Division, which now houses these units, has developed rapidly, and is providing excellent service to many of our students.

The AIDP-supported Siena External Degree Program (EDP) located in Southfield, Michigan, has enabled Siena to gain a foothold in the heavily populated Detroit area. This new program is meeting its initial student and financial goals, and is providing a quality higher education through a variety of instructional formats.

ADMISSIONS

Director of Admissions, Sr. Anne Marie Brown, O.P., added two new Admissions Counselors to her staff this past year—Barbara Stockwell and David Malmquist. They complemented the present staff consisting of John Evans, Transfer Coordinator; Sr. Joan Murphy, O.P., Parish Coordinator; and William Acheson and Fred Smith, Admission Counselors.

Siena's Transfer Coordinator recruited in Junior/Community Colleges, proprietary schools, and worked with veterans and transfer students from four-year institutions. The Parish Coordinator identified Catholic students through parish visits in the Archdiocese of Detroit, and the Dioceses of Lansing, Saginaw, Kalamazoo, Toledo, Cleveland and Youngstown.

The Admissions Counselors visited public and private secondary schools in the Lower Peninsula of Michigan, especially in the counties of Wayne, Macomb, Oakland, Monroe, Hillsdale, Jackson, Genesee, Ingham, Berrien, and Lenawee. Visitations in Illinois and Ohio were also included in the schedule.

Fully aware of the highly competitive nature of college admissions, the Admissions staff continued strong recruiting procedures as well as experimenting with new ideas and techniques. The staff aimed, as always, to maintain a one-to-one relationship between the prospective student and the College. The entire Siena community was encouraged to become involved in the admissions process through program letters, open houses, career days, campus visitations, departmental activities and referrals.

Participation in the National Search program, the publication of a new Viewbook, and visitation of schools in the East increased the inquiry base and added to out-of-state enrollment.

Our students come primarily from Michigan and Ohio. However, the incoming class will include students from New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, North Carolina, Texas, Florida, California and Wisconsin. In addition, international students from Africa, West Indies, Brazil, Japan and Europe will be enrolled at Siena.

The new athletic/recreational facility, our flexible two- and four-year programs, the strong student advising program, and the availability of financial aid have all contributed to our successful recruiting. We believe it when we tell them, "Siena is a great place to be."

Student Life

In a complex and vital institution such as Siena Heights College, with both resident and commuter students, many co-curricular activities and student services are offered to augment the academic program. These out of class activities are aimed at broadening the students' experiences and widening their awareness of current issues as well as meeting their informational needs. Students are encouraged to involve themselves in numerous student/faculty activities where their potential can be developed through discussion, travel, the fine arts, and various interest groups. Siena's students are given many opportunities to accept responsibility and exercise leadership. The enthusiasm, creativity, and freshness of our student body are matched by their friendliness, tolerance and seriousness of purpose. These are the qualities which visitors most often point out as one of the real strengths of this institution.

FACILITIES

During the 1977-78 school year Sage Union was remodeled to accommodate new offices on the main floor for the Chaplain, the Union Director, and the Dean of Student Development. This space was occupied in the early fall, and the change accomplished several important goals: (1) the commuter students are better served; (2) Supervision of Sage Union proved easier; and (3) Savings in secretarial costs were realized.

The new athletic/recreational facility which is nearing completion promises to give the athletic program a real boost. This new facility will encourage integration of the men's and women's sports programs as well as promote greater staff interaction. The possibilities for use during the winter should be revolutionary for campus life.

COUNSELING

Since the counseling staff must maintain a confidential relationship with students, the new counseling rooms on the upper level of Sage Union, which are accessible from four different stairways and all building entrances, are invaluable.

This was the first full year the College had a full-time counselor. This has contributed significantly to improvements in student behavior, morale and retention. Next year additional part-time staff will be added. Also, a new source of counseling information and aid will be offered through an arrangement with one of the Community Mental Health agencies.

STUDENT UNION

Although the Union program was somewhat hampered by renovations on the main floor this past year, activities continued. Major functions during 1977/78 included the Welcome Back Dance, Alumni Weekend, Family Weekend, Renaissance Faire, Fr. Keefer's Farewell Weekend, the first Commuter-Resident Card Party, and several major movies.

Other Union events included wine and cheese parties, several dances, eight with live bands, a Bonfire Sing-a-long, and a variety of Athletic Department fund raising activities.

An Outing Club was organized during spring term and shows great promise for expanded membership growth and activities.

Plans are in progress for Homecoming '78 when Alumni Weekend and Family Weekend activities will coincide with the dedication of the new athletic/recreation facility. Homecoming '78 is scheduled for October 27-29.

ATHLETICS

The Athletic Department has shown a great improvement under the direction of Orby Moss, our new Athletic Director. Mr. Moss has quickly taken charge of a program which was in need of organization and leadership. Mr. Ben Braun, Siena's new men's basketball coach, also coached baseball and taught English. Sr. Mary Alice Murnen, O.P., as usual, did an outstanding job coordinating women's athletics ably assisted by Sr. Maureen Field. The women's teams brought home the Southeastern Women's Athletic Conference (SWAC) all-sports trophy this year.

The new athletic/recreation facility will allow the addition of men's and women's track teams, and the return of men's wrestling. The two basketball courts, four tennis/volleyball courts, and a 200 meter track will provide adequate space for indoor and foul weather activity for all members of the College community.

Siena will offer the following men's intercollegiate sports next year: cross country, soccer, wrestling, baseball golf, tennis, basketball (varsity and JV), and track. Women's sports offerings will include basketball, tennis, volleyball, softball, and track.

The intramural program will provide opportunities for competition between students and faculty in badminton, basketball, bowling, golf, swimming, table tennis, softball, tennis and volleyball.

Club sports next year will include basketball, hockey, flag football and soccer.

RELIGIOUS AFFAIRS

Following nine years as our Chaplain, Fr. John Keefer, O.P. has accepted a new assignment. We have hired new capable members for the newly-formed Campus Ministry Team at Siena — Sr. Marie Carol Hurley, O.P., Rev. James Pfeffer, M.M., and Sr. Jon Taylor.

The Campus Ministry Team, in addition to liturgy, will be involved in personal counseling. Workshops and programs aimed at current social and moral issues will be designed with the aid of faculty and student team members. One of the Campus Ministry Team's major functions this year will be to determine which issues are most pressing and how they can best use their many talents.

RESIDENCE HALLS

Our Residence Hall Director, Brother Ray Jarboe, O.P., was joined this past year by Mrs. Madeline Clark who has very ably assumed the duties of Assistant Residence Hall Director. The House system, which was established only last year, has grown and matured. Once again, the Residence Halls held a very successful open house for the Siena community. Beta Rho, the all-night lounge, was remodeled, including installation of new audio equipment.

Many undergraduate resident student advisors now fill staff positions formerly held by part-time graduate students. This has proven to be quite successful as evidenced by the improved behavior in the dorms. Satisfaction with dorm life improved each semester.

HEALTH SERVICES

The Clinic-Infirmary located in Archangelus Hall has acquired new furniture and much needed equipment this year. These additions make it a much more effective unit.

Financial Operations

Siena Heights continues to achieve an enviable record of fiscal responsibility.

Imaginative, innovative and efficient managerial approaches have enabled the College to historically operate without a deficit. We believe the College has demonstrated its ability to operate at minimum costs while facing spiraling operating costs and ever changing enrollment patterns.

The following tables illustrate sources of income and areas of expenditure supported by this income.

CURRENT OPERATING FUND REVENUE & EXPENDITURE ANALYSIS

1977 - 1978

Revenues	% of Budget
Tuition & Fees	38.7
Auxiliary Enterprises	15.1
Gifts & Grants	11.7
Government Appropriations	16.4
Endowment	0.9
Other Revenues	1.4
Financial Aid	15.8
Total Revenues %	100%
EXPENDITURES

Student Aid	18.1
Auxiliary Enterprises	12.7
Total Expenditures	100%

Clearly the future of Siena calls for continued diligence in budgeting and prudent use of resources.

Trustees

We have an outstanding Board of Trustees, and much of Siena's continued success can be attributed to its dedication, counsel, and concern.

During 1977/78 the Board approved and accepted the Five Year Plan for the College developed by the faculty and administration for the orderly growth of Siena Heights.

The Board also approved a tuition increase, effective with the Summer '78 term. Undergraduate tuition fees were increased to $68.00 per semester hours, and graduate fees to $73.00 per hour. Room and board charges were also increased by $50.00 per semester, but several fees, including student activity fees and parking registration fees, were eliminated. Siena still remains the second lowest in cost among 19 Michigan private colleges, and in the lowest 5% of private college costs in the U.S.

In 1977/78 the Trustees welcomed two new members. Dr. Liberato A. DiDio, Dean of the Graduate School at the Medical College of Ohio, and Thomas A. Clark, President-Elect of the Siena Heights College Alumni Association.

Board member, Richard K. Ransom, chairman and chief executive officer of Hickory Farms of Ohio, Inc., was named Secretary of the Board of Trustees.

Development

Thanks to the thoughtful and generous support of almost 800 donors we can view with pride the results of our Financial Development program during 1977/78.

The loyalty of Siena's alumni, parents, friends and supporting corporations and foundations was evidenced through contributions totaling $742,263.46. Government monies accounted for another $698,855.46, for a total of $1,441,218.92.

Michigan Colleges Foundation

Founded in 1949, the Michigan Colleges Foundation is a non-profit Michigan Corporation organized to provide an efficient and effective medium through which business and industry can annually invest funds in the 16 privately maintained, four year, degree granting, Michigan liberal arts colleges, accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools who are current members of MCF.

The "16 in one" plan is a time-saver for both industry and college officials. For business officers it saves the time required in hearing and deciding on many competing appeals. For college administrators, the MCF program eliminates many man hours and miles.

In the year ending June 30, 1978, MCF distributed $1,336,772 to the members colleges to supplement operating expenses — (9.2% more than last year). The donations represent gifts from 1,124 contributors. Distribution of funds is made on a formula devised by the colleges. Undesignated money is divided 60% equally; 40% in proportion to student enrollment. Designated grants to specific colleges may be made through MCF, and the full amount of such gifts is distributed to the designated college.

Siena Heights College takes pride in being a member of the Michigan Colleges Foundation and takes this opportunity to express our gratitude to all MCF donors this year.

Instructional Services

New Frontiers in Education . . .

In the beginning was the library . . . and the library had books . . . and the books were good. But a new generation of librarians, instructors, and students began to perceive the book as only a part of a much wider spectrum of educational media . . . thus was the genesis of the Instructional Services concept.

You may say a library is still a library . . . inherently boring, the haunt of pale, compulsive grinds watched over by a strange breed whose favorite sound is a brooding, musty silence . . . right? Perhaps, but not at Siena Heights.

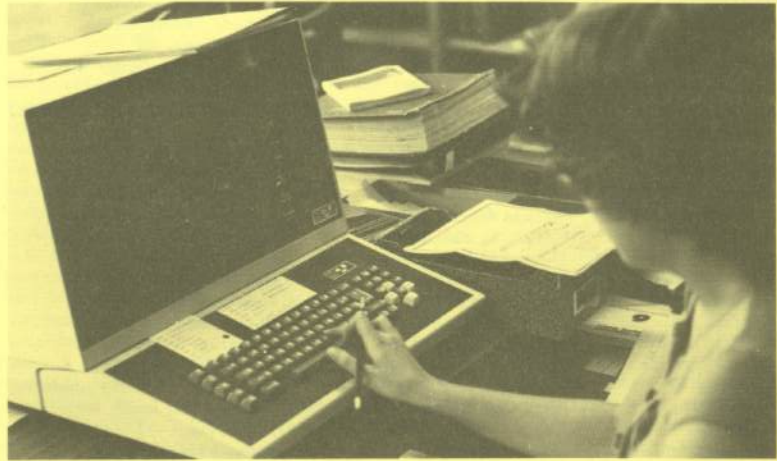

"Our mission is service in the context of college level instruction," explains Charlie Kern, media materials coordinator. "We see ourselves as a front-line operation in the educational process, we work directly with students and faculty in providing library services, television and telecommunications services, computer services and audio-visual services."

The Instructional Services staff is directed by Mark Dombrowski. Jean Baker provides reference and inter-library loan services. Kent Sheets manages the television studio and supervises the audio-visual services. And Kern supervises computer services including the use of the Ohio College Library Center data base to organize the library collection, the Lenawee County Time-Sharing system, and the Siena Heights computer system which is used for computer assisted instruction, programming instruction, and administrative projects.

The Instructional Services staff also includes Marcia Lengnik, acquisitions librarian; Sr. Jane Burke, in charge of circulation; Rudy Nardon, audio-visual services technician; Rosalyn Gerkin, administrative assistant, technical processing clerk, and general factotum; and Linda Ekert, technical service assistant.

"The change has been subtle, but its effect has been profound," says Kern. "It is a change in emphasis, we are now more concerned with content than format. Librarians no longer function as curators in a book museum. We see the library as a component in an overall effort to organize, store, retrieve, and deliver information. From this perspective, it makes sense to view a computer program on magnetic disc, a magazine on microfiche, a poem on cassette, a lecture on video tape, a slide presentation, and a printed book as being merely different manifestations of the same basic phenomenon."

The Instructional Services Division has been functioning with all its components for less than one year, yet its achievements have been substantial. Sheets has produced a new recruiting film and several public relations releases, has been a leader in the Southeastern Michigan Telecommunications Consortium (SEMTEC), and has taught courses in mass communications at the graduate and undergraduate levels.

Kern coordinated the input of all the library's holdings in the areas of religion and philosophy into the OCLC data base (the world's largest data base, accessed by nearly 900 libraries across the nation).

"Inter-library loan requests have increased for our holdings as a result of Charlie's work," says Baker. "Not only have we contributed to the world of scholarship, but we have helped put Siena 'on the map' as a result of the project."

Kern, Nardon, and Ekert are in the process of assembling a computerized listing of the periodical holdings at Siena Heights and Adrian Colleges on Siena's Altair 8800 computer system.

Dombrowski is serving on the Michigan Library Consortium executive committee, and is influential in directing the course of library service on a national level. Mark has focused statewide attention on Siena as a result of his leadership in the consortium and for the installation of an automatic security book deposit system in the library.

"Judge us on where we're going, not where we've been," says Kern.

Kent is presently working on an orientation to Instructional Services, is active in directing the future of cable television in Lenawee County, and is planning future directions for Siena Heights in SEMTEC.

Jean is anticipating increased contributions in the area of inter-library cooperation, as Siena's art holdings are being added to the OCLC data base.

Rudy is computerizing audio-visual equipment inventory, Mark will teach Research Methods in the fall, and Charlie is teaching Information Science and will teach Introduction to Data Processing come fall.

The computer system provides Marcia and the other librarians to analyze the development of Siena's library collection in relation to actual circulation, and thereby bring supply and demand into equilibrium. In the past, the development of the collection was often a reflection of the whims of the individual faculty members rather than a coordinated response to the needs and desires of the library users.

Perhaps the most exciting development is the plan to bring Siena's library up on the Lockheed 'Dialog' data base system. The Lockheed system offers over twenty million records on-line.

"By 1979, Siena Heights College should be one of the leading information centers in this part of the state," says Charlie. "No other institution between Ann Arbor and Toledo will, to my knowledge, provide information services as efficient and sophisticated as we will be able to offer when we come up on the Lockheed Dialog system. I can foresee the day when Siena can offer the community information retrieval services for a nominal fee. The potential is fantastic, we can offer our patrons information in more detail and with more efficiency than we had ever foreseen.

"However, it's not all that rosey. Dialog's 20 million citations may only illuminate our deficiencies. We must expand our periodicals, on microfiche preferably, because the library doesn't have enough room to house them otherwise. And we'll need a microfilm/microfiche reader and printer so that we can produce hard copy reproductions of material in this medium.

"I expect that we'll be able to come up with a reader-printer this year . . . of course, what we really need is a new library building, and then . . ."

Alumni News

Open Letter to Siena Alumni

Dear Friends,

August marks my first anniversary as President of Siena Heights College. This has been a very challenging and productive year, both for myself and the College. I am happy to report that we have both met our goals for the past school year. A sincere thank you to those Alumni and Friends who have helped in our progress. The new school year is fast approaching and promises both excitement and challenge.

The first step in obtaining your help is for us to show you that the college is worthy of your support and interest. We want and need your thoughts about the College's future. We welcome receiving the names of students you might wish to recommend for enrollment. We also need your financial support.

Through the 1978 Phonathon, we noted a marked improvement in the level and number of contributions by Alumni. During the three day event, a select group of volunteer alumni, students, and friends contacted over 1,700 Alumni, resulting in pledges exceeding $9,000. To date we have received nearly 90% of the contributions. While not reaching the total Alumni community through this event, it was hopefully indicative of the growing support for the College. Through letters we have received and the additional personal contacts we have made throughout the country, we are encouraged by your interest and support.

In line with this growth, the 'Institutional Advancement' Department of the College has undergone many changes this summer. Most obvious is the name change to 'Office of College Relations'. As the name implies, this Department is responsible for fostering good relationships with the total Siena community. As an Alumni, Parent or Friend you are an important part of our community. Also, because of the College's financial support of the Alumni Association, a full-time Director of Alumni and Parent Relations has been hired.

As we begin a new school year we need your help. A few possible ways you can assist are:

1. Spread the Word—You are the best public relations contact we have. Each new student recruited helps us in various ways.
2. Volunteer Your Time—The National Alumni Association needs you. Contact our new Director, Kathleen Johnston-Betzoldt.
3. Contribute to the Alumni Fund—To those of you who have given before, may we ask your continued support.

To those of you who have not given recently, please reconsider.

As I begin my second year at Siena, I am optimistic about the College's future. However, only through working as a team can we achieve continued growth in the upcoming year. Let us hear from you soon. We need you.

Thanks for the opportunity to share my concerns and hopes with you.

Louis C. Vaccaro
President

Alumni Board Sets 1978-79 Fund Goal

Dear Alumni:

Let me begin by introducing myself. I am Kathleen (Kathy) Johnston-Betzoldt, your new full-time Director of Alumni and Parent Relations. Since arriving on campus in mid-June, the Board of Directors and I have been busy organizing for 1978-79, and I am confident this will be a very rewarding year for the Alumni Association.

One main objective during the year is to find the alumni we have lost over the years. We are currently reorganizing our records and mailing system. Any information you could offer, on either yourself or other Alumni, would be appreciated.

Another goal is to offer a variety of new programs such as travel packages, ski weekends and social events. Perhaps you would be interested in organizing an Alumni event in your area? This is your Alumni Association and I am interested in what interests you. Any thoughts or suggestions you could offer would be appreciated.

September marks the beginning of the 1978-79 Alumni Annual Fund Drive. A $20,000 goal has been set by the National Alumni Board of Directors. While this is an optimistic goal, I do not feel it is unrealistic. In the last fiscal year over 435 Siena Alumni contributed to the Annual Fund. With minimal effort I am confident we can double the number of alumni contributors.

I look forward to meeting many of you at Reunion Weekend. To those unable to attend, I would appreciate hearing what you would like from your Alumni Association.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Johnston-Betzoldt
Director of Alumni and Parent Relations

Phyllis Compkeko Vandette and her six children surf and ski in sunny California.

Imagine meeting the wife of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, attending opening night performances with the King and Queen of Thailand, witnessing the canonization ceremonies of St. John Neumann in Rome, touring the castle of Mad King Ludwig, and square dancing throughout Austria, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, France, Luxembourg, Belgium, and Holland. These are just a few highlights of the travels of Jane M. Korte Waldo.

As the wife of an Army officer, Jane lived on three continents while caring for her husband and four children. In addition, Jane taught English, established a child care center, worked with the Girl Scouts, started a newsletter in Bangkok, Thailand, and served as a member of the American Youth Advisory Board in Germany.

Two major typhoons created unwelcome excitement. What a pleasure it must be to discover a snake coiled gracefully around the doorknob of your classroom and find the desks hanging from the blackboard! No wonder the Waldo's subscribed to the Chinese philosophy of "bending with the wind."

Jane's husband Lieutenant Colonel Ron Waldo, retired from the U.S. Army in December 1977. Jane and Ron, along with their children Mary Jo, a sophomore at Siena, Martha, John, and Margaret now reside in Hudson and are busy settling back into American life. She serves the Irish Hills Girl Scout Council as a Brownie Troop Leader and is actively involved in the Siena Heights Alumni Association. Just before leaving Deutashland, Jane encountered another Siena graduate, Mary Lou Stars McEnaney '64, the wife of Air Force Major McEnaney. "I left her in sunny Zwei to continue to spread the name of Siena Heights College." Jane's nomadic days are history now. Not a trace of regret darkens the nearly twenty years of adventure in "strange places."

SIENA REVISITED — AN OPEN LETTER TO MY STUDENT FRIENDS

By Dr. Priscilla Piche

"The world is too much with us," as Wordsworth, not my favorite, wrote . . . so a moment or two standing on the height overlooking the white pillars of Ledwidge in a late winter wind is cleansing and exhilarating.

That introduction, pulled out of my recent past, will serve (as intros must serve something) to get me in trouble with my dear English major associates. Because the title is Tennysonian (as you recognize) and the opening passage Wordsworthian — which should depress all of you. The avowed Donnian! But I hear that Sr. Mary Louise is quoting Donne in homilies and if she can turn, turn, turn from Emily, well . . .

Enough of that literary fa la de la.

I revisit Siena on a semestral basis and continue to find it a steady place, strong and cordial. These floating years I teach part-time at Wayne County Community College. There really is no "college" as such (if you think of college as a complex of buildings on a campus, as we are prone to do). There are only classes held together by coordinators in a sign-in and sign-out room at various centers in Detroit and the environs. The names of some of the centers are an interest and a history in themselves: Cathedral, Rosary (now being renamed Greenfield), Nativity, St. Patricks, Mooney.

Seeing my Black students enjoying the comforts of Mooney (the old Latin school for seminarians on Sacred Heart Seminary campus), the spacious class rooms, the venetian blinds, the wide corridors, the wrought iron decor, I think how blessed are these times when the great and great great grandchildren of America's slaves can freely and with some luxury explore the possibilities of a higher education. They too can discover all that it means to be a human being. They make grateful students and the look in their eyes as we explore the verbal patterns in a John Cheever or a Shirley Jackson short story simply "sends" me.

And that brings me to you, my former and present Siena students. Under much less social and economic pressure you have the opportunity to discover your own humanness — and it needs to be said over and over again that that is what your college years are for.

They are for reading everything you can get your hands on from Aristotle to Woolf with K-ung, L-awrence, M-ilton, and N-abokov inbetween. And Shakespeare and Schoonenberg, Donne and Dickinson, Joyce, James, and Johnson. Read!

They are for thinking (read first). Think about what you will do with the rest of your life if you must, but today is where you begin. Take time, after reading, just to be still, hidden in the library stacks or out on some grassy slope. Let the world around you impinge on your skin; feel it on your face. Let the sounds come, the snapsnap of a ping pong ball in action; the muffled talk, footsteps in the distance; nature sounds, birds or wind in trees; trucks unloading at the delivery door. Let it all happen and stay quiet not even listening, just being there so still you hear your own life pulsing inside you. The experience might never raise your salary but it will raise your consciousness and most probably will make you someday a far better executive, salesman, mechanic, teacher.

Can you hear your father or mother saying: We didn't send you to college to dream; we sent you there to make something of yourself. If you hear that, answer gently: that surely the making of yourself is what college is about.

Hundreds and hundreds of offerings are listed on adult education programs around the country that could be titled Making Yourself Over. Courses in how to think, how to meditate, how to read, how to read faster, how to compute, how to not consume, how to assert, how to be aware, how to raise your level of consciousness, how to be happy with what you have, how to grieve.

This is your time to do all that, to "make yourself." The process of making ourselves must go on whatever we are doing making our living. But if we never learn how to do the first, all we'll ever do is the second.

Revisiting Siena always does this to me. Not less either; but more.

New Sports Arena, Recruits, Promise an

A new recreation/athletic facility, the addition of two new sports, the return of two others, and a successful recruiting campaign highlight the 1978-79 athletic year at Siena Heights College.

The 57,000 square foot arena will be ready to accommodate sporting contests in the fall, mens and womens track will leave the starting block for the first time, wrestling and cross country will return to competition, and some of the most highly pursued junior college and high school athletes have chosen Siena as their home field.

"My emphasis and goals are to round out the athletic program at Siena," said director of athletics Orby Moss, "and to give equal time and money to all the teams on campus. However, I realize that mens basketball will get the most public attention, so I've put lots of time into recruiting basketball players this year. A successful basketball program will attract people here in the future."

Coach Ben Braun's top recruits are Fred Walker from Lake Michigan Community College, 6-8 230 lb. Brian Brannick from Jackson Community College, and 6-8 Angelo (Jello) Grimes from a junior college in Texas. Two Michigan high school All-Staters have also been harvested, 6-8 Bruce Swart of Bath High School, and Joe Fleming from Thornapple-Kellogg High School.

Top Recruits

"We had one of the best recruiting years of any college in the state or area," said Moss. "The recruits from junior college will add the age and experience that our team needed. They were all highly rated and recruited. Six of the recruits are potentially varsity material their first year at Siena."

However, Moss speculated that the six players who finished the season on the squad last year will be the "backbone" of this year's team. Among the returnees will be the team's leading rebounder Tyrone Richardson, leading scorer Al Sandiefer, and co-captain John Dillard, who missed more than half of last season due to injury.

Forty candidates, including 15 from last year, are expected for tryouts Oct. 15. The varsity and junior varsity teams will keep 30-35 players between them. The jv. coach is Fred Smith.

A 30-game schedule will open at home Nov. 15 against Shaw College from Detroit. Siena will host the first annual Maple City Tournament at the new facility with Concordia, Mercy, and Dyke Colleges participating.

The team will make a swing east at the start of the season, playing a couple teams in Buffalo, New York. They will go against Mercyhurst College, a team that played in the NAIA National Championships a year ago, on the return trip. Siena will host crosstown rival, Adrian College, Dec. 6 at the new field house.

The Saints had an 8-21 record last season.

"We had a big loss record because some of the team members had bad attitudes toward training rules," said Moss. "A big percentage of the athletes were only athletes at game time, and when it was time to compete they were far behind."

Full Season Schedules

The womens basketball team will open a 26-game schedule Nov. 28 vs Hillsdale. Coach Sr. Mary Alice Murnen's quintet finished second in the Southeastern Womens Athletic Conference title with an 8-2 mark last year. They were 11-11 overall for the season.

The team's leading scorer Wendy Schwark and a host of other freshmen will be returning. The only absentee will be team captain of last year, Ruth Gerdeman.

The ladies also had a fine recruiting campaign with the acquisition of 6-1 Lannal Campbell from Jackson Community College, and a pair of outstanding freshmen guards, Diedre Driver from Wisconsin and Carol Crissey from Plymouth.

"The schedule is tougher this year, but the talent has been upgraded also," said Moss.

The womens volleyball team also had a strong recruiting season with the addition of Kathy Wyderko from Henry Ford Junior College and Kelly Gerrard from Mott Junior College. The two will help an Orby Moss team that was lacking in experience last year, but still managed to tie for the league lead. Strong players returning are sophomores Barb Herta and Shelly Michael.

The Saints will be hosting an invitational volleyball tournament on Saturday during Homecoming Weekend and will entertain the preseason SWAC Tourney Sept. 22.

The women will compete in the Wayne State University Tournament, Sept. 23 against some of the bigger and better schools in the state.

The regular season will conclude with a tournament at the University of Toledo with Wright State and Kent State offering some stiff competition.

There was no cross country last year, as no recruiting was done because of the change in athletic directors.

This year however, Siena student Mike Muron has taken the reins and will serve as runner-coach. He and his brother, freshman Don Muron, are two of the stronger runners on the team.

"Look for Tyrone Wilson Jr. and Tom McCanna (Pontiac Catholic High School) to also be strong," said Moss.

Interest is expected to grow for mens and womens tennis with the added convenience of four indoor courts in the new field house. The teams play in both the fall and spring.

Junior Pam Carr was named the Most Valuable Player on the womens team and the Outstanding Player of the SWAC Conference last season.

The men get underway Sept. 19 vs Grand Rapids Bible College and the women's home opener is Sept. 26 vs Mercy. The ladies will host the SWAC Tournament Oct. 21.

The men's coach is Braun and the women are under the tutelage of Sr. Mary Alice.

Graduate assistant Doug Scheich will coach the mens wrestling team that will return to competition after several years in hibernation. The regular season opens Dec. 14 at home vs Grand Rapids Bible.

Fred Smith's golf team also plays two seasons, one in the fall and one in the spring. Last year's standouts were MVP Ron Williams, Steve Hunter who shot a school record 71, and team captain Chris Molloy. This strong lineup returns along with two or three very promising freshmen who were recruited.

"The golf team is closer to being really good than any other team in the department," claimed Moss. "The team goal is to win the district golf title."

When asked about this coach Smith responded: "We just might be able to win the thing in another year or two."

The soccer club, under the direction of Ad Hoc coach Hans Berkhof, opens at home Sept. 19 vs Olivet College.

The highlight of the baseball season last year was the team's trip to Atlanta, for a week of solid baseball in the warm climate. They will travel south again this year (April 7-14) competing against such powers as Georgia Tech. The regular season opens at home March 31 vs Jordan.

Returnees are shortstop Larry Sands, outfielder Rob Mandle, second baseman Kevin Randazzo, outfielder Bruce Ross, first baseman Steve Schultz, and pitcher Mike Smith.

The team also acquired a couple good prospects in infielder-pitcher Don Matera from Wisconsin, and infielder Bill Jones from Detroit Western High School. Braun is the coach.

The womens softball team suffered a losing season last year, but the season was not a total loss with the doubleheader sweep over Adrian College.

"This marked the first time the women had beaten Adrian in anything in probably seven years," said Moss.

Standouts returning are pitcher-outfielder Lisa Lee, catcher-infielder Wendy Swark, and pitcher Sue Frazier. Coach Nancy Smith's team opens against Olivet April 6. All home games are played at Riverside Park.

The 1978-79 season marks the first year of mens and womens track and field.

"With all the other recruiting going on we didn't have much time to recruit for the track teams," said Moss, who is the track coach, "but the new indoor track (200 meters) should attract some students this year.

"We're hosting two very large indoor track meets this year (most county high schools and Ann Arbor and Jackson High Schools). From this exposure we hope to establish a base for recruiting for the 1979-1980 season.

"The overall goal this year has been to establish a positive attitude at Siena and gain respect within the state for our athletic program here. Our recruiting efforts have been towards adding experience to our very young teams. The addition of the facility will make our program legitimate, where we can have a place we can call home."

Adrian Woman to Coach Softball

Nancy Smith has been named the coach of the woman's softball team for the 1978-79 athletic season at Siena. She is also the girl's varsity volleyball coach at Adrian High School.

Nancy is a resident of Adrian and is a salesperson-secretary for Baltz and Associates Real Estate.

"I am pleased to be a part of Siena's growing athletic program," said Nancy. "With the opening of the new athletic facility and the scores of new women athletes, I feel confident our teams will win their share of sports honors."

Women Capture All-Sports Trophy

Siena Heights took the Southeastern Women's Athletic Conference "All-Sports Trophy", edging Concordia College, 67½ points to 63½.

The ladies at Siena took first place in tennis with a 6-0 record, tied with Concordia in volleyball with a 5-1 record, placed second in bowling, and second in basketball with an 8-2 mark.

Individual honors in basketball went to Wendy Schwark, first team All-Conference; Peg Mulherin, second team; and Ruth Gerdeman, honorable mention. Sue Frazier was named to the All-Conference team in bowling. Barb Herta and Shelly Michael took first team all-conference honors in volleyball, with Wendy Schwark named to the second team and Kathy Bastian given honorable mention. Pam Carr, Ann Schwartz, Jean Schwartz and Shelly Abel were named to the all-conference tennis team.

Sr. Mary Alice Murnen, Siena coach, was named president of the SWAC for the 1978-79 season.

Bodenbach Named Athletic Trainer

Paul A. Bodenbach has been named the athletic trainer at Siena for the 1978-79 season. He comes to Siena from the University of Wisconsin-Parkside, where he has been a student trainer for the past four years.

Bodenbach has had experience working with several sports with special emphasis on basketball, football, soccer and women's volleyball. He was also a trainer with the Racine Raiders, a semi-pro football team in Racine, Wisconsin.

"Paul will be responsible for setting up the new training room facility in the fieldhouse and will oversee the physical conditioning and training of all women's and men's teams," said Siena director of athletics Orby Moss.
